Minule muutuvad reaalseks ainult need asjad, mis on sõnastatud. Peab olema keegi, kes ütleb SÖNA, alles siis ma saan aru, et ka see ASI, mida sõna märgib, on olemas. [...] Tõepoolest, maailm on loodud Sõna abil. Kirjandus loob ja muudab maailma. [...] Seda me saame alles siis teada, kui keegi selle sõnastab.”

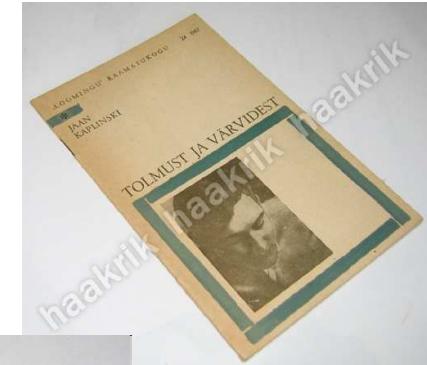

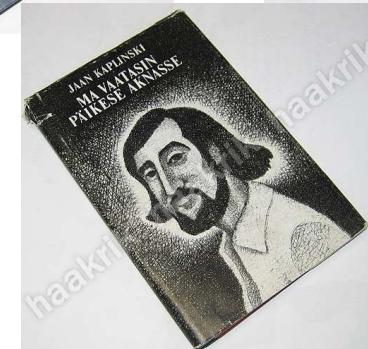

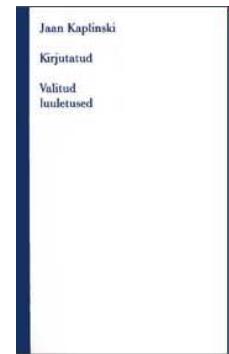

V. Luik. Sõna on rohkem kui sõna. – Keel ja Kirjandus 2005, 10: 777–779

„Only these things which are worded become real for me. At first someone has to say a WORD, when I am able to realize that a THING, which the word expresses, exists. [...] Indeed, the world is created with the help of Word. Literature creates and changes the world. [...] We become aware of that only after it has been expressed by someone.”

“Vercingetorix Said”: Caesar, you can take/ the land where we live away from us ,/ but you cannot take the land from us where we have died. / I’ve thrown down my sword at your feet. / That is how we are, my people and I; / I know what is coming. / All those who deserved to live / in the Arvernian land are dead, / and I do not want to live / with those who are left/ /---/ It is my hand and the hand of my people / that will bring you down, / my hand wielding the sword of the Vandals.

- No one anywhere needs your history, your ends and / beginnings. / Peace. Simple peace to the jellyfish, and to grouse eggs; peace, to the ant's rushing pathways; peace, to birds of paradise / and the ginko / peace, to the sky; peace, / to you snipe's flight / peace, to apples, pears, plums, apricots, oranges, / wild roses growing on the railroad guardshack: / Requiem, Requiem aeternum. / (1967/1985)
- “Ballad of Mary’s Own Land”: No strength any more [---] One random shriek of an eagle, the flight of the one-day moth — / if you lose your songs and your language, it is total loss
- IN EVERY EYE / of every globe-flower / last year’s sun rises / and silently watches / with its own eyes....
- NEW BUTTERFLIES ARE MADE of dust and color, but we / are planted in the ground like broken bones to replace our-selves.

The center of the world is right here. / I am carrying it with me / as we all do. The center of the world / is thrust through me / like a pin through the body of an insect. / It hurts again and again. / The center of the world is painful; / it is the pain.

Modern man, Western man has defined himself as a machine. Machine has been the ideal of the Western man, and he has really tried to become a machine, to act as a machine, to replace himself with a machine wherever it possible. In some important aspects, the history of the Western civilization has been the history of a gradual evolution of man into machine, gradual formalization, algorithmization of human intellectual activity, even technical, scientific and artistic creation. A great part of modern art is already made, generated by theories and algorithms. Artist has evolved into art theorist and art theorist into algorithm-maker, program-maker. Their effort is directed toward creating an art-creating machine.

Ilmar Kruusamäe, "The Revenant" (1978)

*THE LAND MUST BE FILLED WITH CHILDREN and filled with grandchildren
and great-grandchildren
and songs and children
and one must fight against everything strange or hostile everything hostile or false and fight wherever possible wherever possible and necessary because all life is fleeting and for the children the future remains and the land and all the past
the land must be filled with children
and great-grandchildren
if the present asks for existence and for the future's arrival
the land must be filled with children
with the land's own children
and songs and children
the land must be filled with children*

Bitter and Passer-by

*Beautiful, beautiful is the land, beautiful is the land
I love.*

Kristiina ja Andres Ein

“Image and the Senses” (“Kujund ja meeled”, 1966):
Eidetic phenomenality does not coincide with memory. On the contrary, it brings sensual activity even further. Let us take an example: the artist sees a big rock covered with moss. He will be sensually so enchanted, that after passing the rock he will continue seeing the rock, and he does not even notice the bushes and trees entering his field of vision in reality.

“The Subconscious Is Constantly Drunk” (2000):
I do not consider myself a formalist. In poetic language I express those moods and states of mind that cannot be expressed otherwise. If the play turns into magic, it won't be a play any more. I believe in sudden ideas, effects and enlightenment. I believe in inspiration.

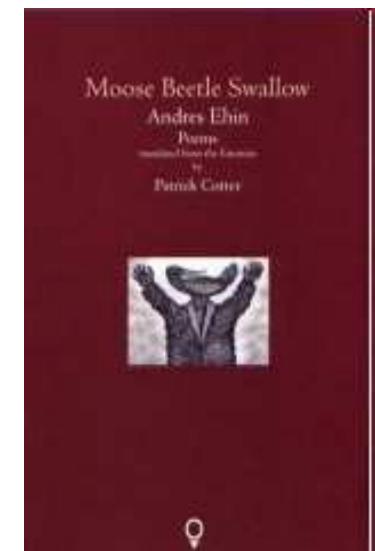

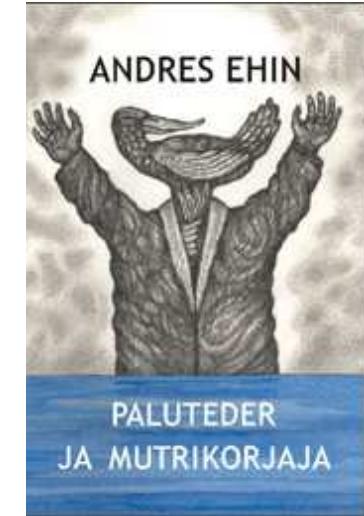

TO BE A DOG-APARTMENT

to be a dog-apartment with three barking rooms with a snout-bathroom where one tap dribbles cold and the other hot slobber to be a dog-apartment with floors that howl towards moon-yellow ceiling lamps at nights

that detests the smell of cats*

whose sofa hairs bristle up even at the stench
of distant felines*

~Fogdabbler (2008)

*deep under ground dwell birds
soiled birds
if you wash them clean their cornflower blue plumage will gleam
these birds are moosebeetleswallows
and deep blue moleeagles
with these birds
Estonian plays Indian Indian plays Estonian
but those birds only allow the indigenous peoples to pluck their blue feathers we Estonians and Indians come from the land of three-coloured dogs and underground birds
but where are we going*
